GIVE A BUFFET SUPPER

Guests enjoy the informal, easy buffet suppers which are so popular these days. What could be nicer than to be able to spend the evening with your guests without the ever present worry about the lunch you are serving later in the evening. With the buffet supper the foods may all be prepared in advance which leaves only the last minute work of setting it on the table. This can easily be done while the coffee is boiling.

Select the foods you serve with an eye to color, for a gay looking table will bring many compliments from your guests and will add to your success as a hostess. The foods served need not be expensive but should have variety.

BREAD STUFFING—NO. 2

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|--|
| 1 quart stale bread in pieces | ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning |
| 1 teaspoon salt | 1 egg |
| ½ teaspoon pepper | 1 teaspoon chopped parsley |
| 2 tablespoons fat drippings, melted | ½ teaspoon onion, chopped fine |
| ⅛ teaspoon ginger | Heart, liver and gizzard, or pork or liver sausage |

Or soak bread in cold water and squeeze dry. Heat fat in a spider, add the soaked bread, stir until fat is absorbed. Season to taste, add the egg, slightly beaten, and the onion cut fine.

EGG PLANT OR WHITE SQUASH

Boil two egg plants (skin, stem and all) until you can stick a fork through easily. Split egg plant in half (stem and all), scoop out center very carefully, so as not to break the shell. Add to scooped out portion of egg plant:

- The inside of a quarter of a loaf of stale bread
- 1 onion
- A small piece of garlic
- A sprig of parsley
- 1 tomato or a tablespoonful of canned tomato
- 1 egg, pepper and salt to taste

Chop up all together very fine. Put a tablespoonful of lard in a frying pan. When hot add mixture and let fry until it leaves the pan clean. Stir constantly. When fried put in a baking pan and sprinkle some toasted bread crumbs over it. Put three small pieces of butter on top and let bake for about ten minutes, or until brown. Your success depends upon the mixing and frying.

- To 1 coffee cup of boiled rice add:
- 2 eggs
- Butter size of an egg, melted
- ½ pint of sifted flour
- A level teaspoon Royal baking powder
- 2 heaping tablespoons of sugar

When the croquettes are a light brown take up with a perforated ladel. Put on a brown paper in a biscuit pan to drain. Flavor with vanilla.

"THE MIXING BOWL"

ABOUT COOKING FOOD IN QUANTITIES

Most of us at some time or another have had the experience of being asked to serve on committees for church or community suppers and have been decidedly at a loss in knowing approximately the amount of foods to plan for serving fifty to one hundred or whatever the number it is estimated will attend. We are used to planning meals and to cooking for six or eight or maybe ten people, but when we get up into the larger figure we have a decided feeling of bewilderment.

A well-known chef in planning banquets or large dinners says that he estimates somewhat as follows:

One gallon of soup will serve approximately forty persons, allowing a good-sized serving, or forty-four people if smaller servings are given. The latter number can be counted if the soup is a thin one. When a thick soup, such as a chowder or a cream of spinach soup is served, it is best to count on forty-servings for the gallon.

One gallon of cooked vegetables—peas, carrots, diced beets, creamed celery—will serve thirty-eight to forty people.

Fifty pounds of potatoes (calculated uncooked) when boiled and mashed will serve from 125 to 135, counting on the generosity of the server.

One pound of finely ground coffee will make two gallons of strong coffee or enough to serve eighty people. A gallon of cream will add the necessary trimmings for one hundred cups while a pound of sugar will serve sixteen to twenty.

A pound of butter can be counted on to make 48 pieces or enough to give twenty-four person two pieces each.

There are 300 small olives in a gallon. The usual allowance is three per person.

A gallon of ice cream will serve from twenty-four to thirty people, depending on how it is cut or dished.

If rolls are served, of course, it is an easy matter to calculate the number required. If bread is used remember that a large loaf cuts into twenty-two average slices and that one slice cut in half should be planned for each serving.

In planning the meat figure that each pound of meat when trimmed and cooked will weigh at most but a scant three-quarters of a pound and cannot be counted on to serve more than four people.

Salads such as potato or a vegetable salad are planned one-half cup to a serving or thirty-two servings for each gallon or mixed salad. When the salad is coleslaw a gallon can be counted on to serve about thirty-six.

FOOD TABLES

Both the fuel value of food and the body's energy needs are measured in a heat unit called a calorie. The energy requirement for a normal adult engaged in a sedentary occupation is from 2,200 to 2,800 calories a day for a man, and from 1,800 to 2,200 calories for a woman. For those who are overweight and wish to reduce, the amount of food eaten should supply from 1,200 to 1,600 calories a day. The exact amount will depend upon the size, age, activity, and the rate of loss of weight of the individual. For most people, a loss of 2 pounds a week is sufficient. Sometimes at the beginning of weight reduction, in spite of a low food intake and increased exercise, there is no apparent loss in weight for a period of a week or two. This is because the body fat is being replaced by water. Usually with persistence this condition will right itself.
